

Wow, okay

Wrap your head around a bit of Barbiecore for fun.

- Forgoing artwork in favour of framing furniture with a statement mural is a bold choice, but painting the backdrop, wall and floor more subdued hues will create the visual balance you need to pull it off. Tie a playful mural into a space by introducing decorative items of a smaller scale in the same colour palette.
- To recreate our design, sketch it on a piece of paper, then use a ruler and pencil to overlay the sketch with a grid. We painted our wall in Resene SpaceCote Flat in Resene Sea Fog (top) and Resene Contented before using a metre ruler and pencil to translate our grid onto the wall, then adding the shapes as they appeared in each box. For clean lines, use a speed brush to outline the shapes before filling them in with a small roller. You'll find the tools you need at your local Resene ColorShop, along with the colours we used for our mural: (from bottom left) Resene Grenadier, Resene See The Light, Resene Temptation and Resene Petal.
- Make matching placemats by applying your base coats to your MDF boards and leaving them to dry; we used Resene Lumbersider in Resene Contented and Resene See The Light. Next, apply the other Resene paints in a series of random dots before using strips of cardboard to swipe through them to create artistic patterns. 🍷
